To whom it may concern,

I am concerned about The Drip & surrounding river area.

This is without doubt one of the most beautiful sites not just in Mudgee but Australia. I have travelled extensively through out Australia and the Goulburn River & The Drip rates with anything I have seen in Central Australia or the Northern Territory it runs second in my mind to only The Flinders Ranges as my favourite destination. The shock of its beauty is its position. Driving the Mudgee road with its typical farmland scenery you would never expect the dramatic change in landscape with just a two minute drive off the highway. I can not see why this area can not be included in the Goulburn River National Park. It is defiantly significant enough to be a National Park in its own right but truly magnificent within the existing NP.
