The skulduggery by the company, the NSW government and the Department of Planning concerning this application will go down in history. Agreements made by Rio Tinto back in 2003 to spare the ridge and surrounds near Bulga have been discarded. The court case won by Bulga residents, in which the NSW government joined against the residents in the unholy alliance with Rio Tinto, has been overturned by the hasty alteration to planning laws, with the "Mining SEPP" now prioritising money over human health, the environment and water resources. There is certainly something rotten in the state of NSW, and in the Dept. of Planning, trampling on communities for short term profits, mostly sent overseas to shareholders in this London-based outfit.
