Description of the development consent

The Shoalhaven Starches factory at Bomaderry produces flour, gluten, starch, glucose and ethanol for food, beverage, hand sanitiser, paper and fuel products. The ethanol expansion project, approved in 2009, allowed an increase in ethanol production up to 300 million litres a year. The approval also covered installation of a waste water treatment plant and other odour control measures.

Description of proposed modification

Shoalhaven Starches Pty Ltd is seeking to modify the Shoalhaven Starches factory. The modification involves construction of a 60 megawatt (MW) gas-fired co-generation plant and conversion of existing boilers from using coal to natural gas. The 60 MW co-generation plant would replace two previously approved but not constructed cogeneration plants on the site. The co-generation plant would be housed within a new building on the site and would be supported by a new electrical substation, gas compressor building and water tanks.
