

I wish to OBJECT to the above application

Prior to Veolia starting their bioreactor Tarago was promised a tip that wouldn't stink, yet here we are being impacted by the stench far too frequently. The stench that comes out of the bioreactor is absolutely disgusting and getting worse with every year that passes. It prevents you from going outside, opening your windows and wakes you from your sleep should you have the windows open as the smell starts to waft in. How can Veolia be trusted with anything that they say when it comes to an incinerator, when they can't even stop a smell that they said would never exist. Why should Australia's citizens and tax payers be impacted by a multi-national companies interests and profits?

I live on the land having purchased my own property, with my wife we built our house and have started our family here. What right does this company have to come and ruin my hopes and dreams for our future here? The effects this will have on myself and my family are unknown and it's not a risk I am willing to take by staying here to find out the answer.

What will the effects be to my livestock and crops? Who is going to pick up the pieces in years to come for the wrong decisions of today? Why should I even have to consider this scenario? I know the Government seems not to be even giving it a thought. Why would you even consider putting an incinerator so close to prime agricultural land that provides products that feed the state. Why would you even consider putting an incinerator in the Sydney Catchment area that will in turn effect the people of Sydney who you seem so desperate to protect?

Not only do I live locally but I work locally as well, why should I be forced to find a new career if I chose to not work so closely to the incinerator? Why are the lives and careers of people not being put before profits? Veolia says it will employ locals where possible but I ask how local will these people be to the village of Tarago? Where will they live when there are very few properties available? The answer to that question is not in Tarago, so the economic benefits and job prospects for this particular area are not as high as they think or are projecting. The people employed will drive in from other areas go to work and then drive home and I can't see there being any major economic benefit to the community that is going to be most impacted. The only thing being impacted will be the local roads which are barely able to maintain the traffic on them at the current rate let alone with increased traffic movements.

I have not made a reportable political donation.
