Dear Jackie,

I have just left a voice message on your landline phone, but thought I would now email.

I am having difficulties in two areas in regards to advertising for purposes of obtaining a RAP list for 2 separate projects.

1. Many local newspapers in western Sydney have closed down. A representative of the Daily Telegraph told me Friday that 100 local newspapers have closed down since COVID19 began last year. Certainly I was in the process of placing an ad with one paper which closed down during our negotiations due to the current lock down.

The Guidelines state a local newspaper is required, and/or the Koori Mail.

It seems that an ad in the latter maybe the only option in many cases. Am I correct in assuming that the use of the Koori Mail as a sole paper is acceptable?

2. In a second case, the client, is reluctant to include personal contact names in the advertisement. They have suggested the use of a QR code which links to the project concerned, and lists a contact – both phone and email – but not a person. Is this acceptable?

I am happy to talk further on the phone if you need clarification,

Regards,

Hi Michael,

I have gone down that path already, for another project, and also contacted Heritage NSW. Jackie MacDonald said she would take the problem of the lack of local newspapers upwards for policy consideration.

RNE and Central projects both used the Koori Mail.

Hi Liz,

I was writing up the test exc for this and asked Brye for the name of newspaper the ad was in. He advised me it was the Koori Mail - my unfortunate understanding is that HNSW didn't count this as a 'local' newspaper per the guidelines.

Did you want to double check this with Josh?

Cheers

- 4.1.3 Proponents must write to the Aboriginal people whose names were obtained in step 4.1.2 and the relevant Local Aboriginal Land Council(s) to notify them of the proposed project. The proponent must also place a notice in the local newspaper circulating in the general location of the proposed project explaining the project and its exact location. The notification by letter and in the newspaper must include:
