I believe it would be a great mistake for the NSW government to go along with fracking without looking at the side-effects already seen in the USA, Europe and Queensland.

A lot of observations exist to make one wary of a technology which is hugely wasteful of water, forcefully introduces chemicals and gases into layers where the groundwater can be contaminated. Human survival depends on unspoilt water and this is the supreme value, not measured in dollars.

Alart from these major objections, has anyone seen photos of beautiful country landscapes after that industry has had its way? I have and it's enough to make you cry.

Your responsibility in our democracy is to safeguard our essential values, not to promote money-generating but destructive technologies
