The City East Cable Tunnel (CECT) is one of a number of discrete projects forming part of the wider Sydney CityGrid Project, which is being undertaken to meet the expected electricity needs of the Sydney CBD and inner suburbs up to 2020.

The CECT comprises a 3.2km long 132kV cable tunnel from the proposed sub-transmission switching station located at the corner of Riley and Albion Streets, Surry Hills, to the new City North Zone Substation at the corner of Erskine and Sussex Streets. Also included as part of this project application is the 140 metre extension of the existing 132kV City South Cable Tunnel from Ann Street to Riley Street, Surry Hills. The tunnel(s) would interface with five (5) existing and proposed EnergyAustralia substations along the route.

In addition, the tunnel would also house two 33kV cables from the existing sub-transmission substation at Ann Street, Surry Hills, and will surface via a bore or shaft in the vicinity of the Domain, Sydney, from where they will be laid in a pit and duct system and buried in the road alignment.

A project description is not attached but reference is made to EnergyAustralia's Concept Environmental Assessment Report exhibited from 17 December 2008 to 16 February 2009 and the Submissions Response & PPR dated May 2009. In addition, Concept Conditions of Approval for the CityGrid Project were signed by the Minister on 20 September 2009.
