This is a submission to the Narrabri Gas EIS

We object to this project

Knitting Nannas against gas New England North West is asking PAC to recommend that NSW government to buy back gas exploration licences covering the Pilliga Forest to ensure the largest remaining temperate woodland in eastern Australia is protected for future generations. Pilliga forest is a refuge for koalas, eastern pygmy possums, black striped wallaby, Pilliga mouse and a host of other threatened species that are endemic to the Pilliga Forest or have disappeared from so much of NSW

The creation of an industrial gas field in the Pilliga poses an unacceptable threat to native animals and critical ground water supplies.

There have already been at least 20 spills of produced water and many environmental breaches ever since exploration and exploration drilling began.

If the NSW government approves this project, these impacts will be scaled up massively, with potentially catastrophic consequences for wildlife and water supplies.

Gas giant Santos's Environmental Impact Statement for its proposal to create an 850-well gas field in the Pilliga forests does not adequately address management of endangered wildlife

Yours sincerely

Jan Brahe
