

One year ago we called on the Government of NSW to uphold the recommendation of the Planning Assessment Commission and refuse Anglo American's proposed open cut coal mine at Drayton South.

The mine was rejected, but now we face the same threat again.
We call on the Government of NSW to:

- restore certainty and fairness to the planning system by rejecting Anglo American's second application for a new mine at Drayton South; and
- protect our state significant industry by prohibiting new mining on and within 10km of the equine critical industry cluster.

It is still the wrong place, still the wrong mine.
