Information about this licence

Dictionary

The licence contains a dictionary, which defines terms used in the licence. It is found at the end of the licence.

Responsibilities of licensee

Separate to the requirements of this licence, general obligations of licensees are set out in the Protection of the Environment Operations Act 1997 ("the Act") and the Regulations made under the Act. These include obligations to:

- Ensure persons associated with you comply with this licence, as set out in section 64 of the Act.
- Control the pollution of waters and the pollution of air (see for example sections 120 - 132 of the Act).
- Report incidents causing or threatening material environmental harm to the environment, as set out in Part 5.7 of the Act.

Transfer of licence

Transfer of the licence to another person may be requested by the licensee using the form for this purpose available from the EPA.

Variation of licence conditions

Variations to the conditions of this licence may be requested by the licensee using the form for this purpose available from the EPA. The EPA may also vary a licence at any time by written notice without an application being made.

Where a licence has been granted in relation to development which was assessed under the Environmental Planning and Assessment Act 1979 in accordance with the procedures applying to integrated development, the EPA may not impose conditions which are inconsistent with the development consent conditions until the licence is first reviewed under Part 3.6 of the Act.

Duration of licence

This licence will remain in force until the licence is surrendered by the licence holder or until it is suspended or revoked by the EPA or the Minister. A licence may only be surrendered with the written approval of the EPA.

Licence review

The Act requires that the EPA review your licence at least every 3 years after the issue of the licence, as set out in Part 3.6 of the Act. You will receive advance notice of the licence review. For licences held immediately before 1 July 1999, the first review will take place before 1 July 2002.

Fees and annual return to be sent to the EPA

The licence requires you to forward to the EPA an Annual Return, comprising a Statement of Compliance and a summary of any monitoring required by the licence (including the recording of complaints).

The Annual Return must be submitted within 60 days after the end of each reporting period. Where a licence is transferred, surrendered or revoked, a special reporting period applies.

For each licence fee period you must pay:

- an administrative fee; and
- a load-based fee (if applicable).

Usually the licence fee period is the same as the reporting period.

See condition R1 and the accompanying form regarding the Annual Return requirements.

The EPA publication "A Guide to Licensing" contains information about how to calculate your licence fees.

Public register and access to monitoring data

Part 9.5 of the Act requires the EPA to keep a public register of details and decisions of the EPA in relation to, for example:

- licence applications
- licence conditions and variations
- statements of compliance

Under s320 of the Act application can be made to the EPA for access to monitoring data which has been submitted to the EPA by licensees.

Statement of significance:

This site is significant as it is representative of the early technology used in an effort to produce food to feed the first European colony. It is representative of the many failures at food production despite ambitious attempts, and of the limitations in materials and expertise available to the colony. The site has significant associations with early figures such as Samuel Marsden, George Caley and Governor King. The archaeological significance of the site is high as there is the potential for relics associated with the early milling activities to occur.

History

Historical notes: The first mill was constructed of timber between 1798 and early 1801 possibly slightly upstream from the later structure. Construction took nearly 2 years due to a shortage of labour. The mill was destroyed by floods in 1801 prior to its opening. Flour was a vital commodity in the colony and from as early as 1788 theft of flour was punishable by death (Tatrai 1994). Governor King took an active interest in the progress of the mill from this time on and corresponded with Lord Hobart on this issue. From 1801 an oxen, and then a horse-mill was established but this failed as it was so hard to work that the animals died. This phase of the mill was abandoned by 1803. A new substantial stone mill was constructed between late 1803 and early 1804 under the supervision of Alexander Dollis who had built a mill at Norfolk Island. Within 5 months the dams had failed and then, when they were reinforced, it was found that they did not hold enough water anyway except after rain. Problems with the dams continued through 1805 and in March of that year work began on a new stone dam which was completed in April 1806. In the same month most of the dam collapsed due to poor workmanship. In the meantime the mill house itself was showing signs of structural problems. Many of the new schemes and proposals from about 1803 appear to have been driven by the Reverend Samuel Marsden who was managing the works from at least 1805. Between 1810 and 1812 after the ongoing failures of the mill, Marsden built his own watermill which survived until 1866. Many of the details of the history of construction of the mill are recorded in letters and accounts written by George Caley (a botanist and colleague of Sir Joseph Banks and a neighbour to the mill house). (Tatrai 1994)

Assessment of significance

SHR Criteria a) [Historical significance] This site is representative of the many failures at food production despite ambitious attempts, and of the limitations in materials and expertise available to the colony. The site has significant associations with early figures such as Samuel Marsden, George Caley and Governor King.

SHR Criteria e) [Research potential] This site is significant as it is representative of the early technology used in an effort to produce food to feed the first European colony. The archaeological significance of the site is high as there is the potential for relics associated with the early milling activities to occur.

SHR Criteria f) [Rarity] The site is a rare example of early convict industry in the Parramatta settlement.

Assessment criteria: Items are assessed against the  State Heritage Register (SHR) Criteria to determine the level of significance. Refer to the Listings below for the level of statutory protection.

Recommended management:

Objective: As a long term aim, this site will be managed to provide an interpretive instillation in the location of the former mill location to express the former use of the site and its natural qualities. Actions: To this end the Parramatta Park Trust will explore interpretive strategies that take advantage of the steep landform – for example a cascade and pool installation that would be symbolic of the original Mill pond. Physical condition and/or Archaeological potential: The site has no visible physical remains but has high archaeological potential and sensitivity.

Former use: Farming, botanic garden, racecourse

History

Historical notes: Government, or Dodds, Farm was the site of the first European farming activity at Parramatta. Henry Dodd was in charge of the operations, as he had been at Sydney Cove. The site was established by Dodd who built several structures that we know of including a barn, granary, cottages and huts. He was a personal servant to Governor Philip, having come out from England from Phillips estates. Phillip stayed with Dodd at the farm house prior to the construction of the first Government House on Rose Hill. Dodd was assigned a number of convicts to undertake the work with him, and appears to have had a good reputation for being able to make the convicts work to their capacity without mistreating them. Dodd died in 1791, apparently from an illness contracted whilst chasing thieving convicts from his crops. He was replaced by Thomas Clark sometime before 1791. The soil was quickly depleted and farming activities spread westward to Toongabbie and Castle Hill. The site of Dodds farm has subsequent associations with botanist George Calley and his work (Kazz et al p 60) and Governor Bligh, who was granted 105 acres in 1806 (Kazz et al p68). The area was also associated with a horse racing course during the 1880s.

Assessment of significance

SHR Criteria a) [Historical significance]	This site is representative of colonial authority (Philip was under orders to begin cultivation immediately on arrival in the colony), the quest for self sufficiency, the inadequacy of the skills and technology which came out on the First Fleet, and convict labour. It therefore illustrates some of the most important themes associated with the early European settlement. The site is associated with Henry Dodd, Philip's personal servant, one of the few skilled farmers to arrive on the First Fleet, and Superintendent of the Convicts at Parramatta. The site is the location of the first successful European farming in Australia and it is associated with some of the most interesting stories of the early settlement (thieving convicts, farming success and failure etc).
SHR Criteria c) [Aesthetic significance]	The site is now a long empty paddock with the Parramatta Stadium and swimming pool providing a backdrop to the east. Despite the visual intrusiveness of the stadium it is still possible to gain some of the pastoral ambience of the site.
SHR Criteria d) [Social significance]	The site was the scene of a lengthy conservation battle in the early 1980s which centred around opposition to the construction of the Parramatta Stadium.
SHR Criteria e) [Research potential]	The site is technologically significant as it represents the early agricultural industry in Australia and the need to adapt this to Australian conditions. The Parramatta Stadium and subsequent landscaping has potentially destroyed part of this site. However it is likely that some, potentially substantial, archaeological remains of the gardens, cropped areas and buildings survive.
SHR Criteria f) [Rarity]	The site is a rare survivor of the first few years of Parramatta township.
SHR Criteria g) [Representativeness]	The site is representative of the early years of European settlement and industry in this area.
Integrity/Intactness Archaeological site. Probably partially disturbed.

Assessment criteria:	Items are assessed against the  State Heritage Register (SHR) Criteria to determine the level of significance. Refer to the Listings below for the level of statutory protection.

Recommended management:

Objective: The site of Dodds Farm will be managed to interpret the multiple uses of this area: growing the first successful crops in the colony, the 1800 botanic gardens, Bligh's farm and the race course. Actions: To this end the Parramatta Park Trust will: plant a grid of grasses, and interpret the site with detailed signage; provide path extension from the farm and botanic gardens sites along the alignment of the former Pitt Row, ending in a jetty structure to the River pond. This jetty will interpret the earlier river crossing and connect to other pathway systems along the river bank. (Parramatta Park Landscape Master Plan 2002, p.51)

Statement of significance:

Cumberland Oval has been in this location since the 1880s first as Alfred Cricket Ground. The oval is significant in its representation of the formal recreational activities which have always taken place in the park. Now the site of the Parramatta Stadium it is also significant because it represents the history of annexation of park lands for other uses. The battle to prevent the construction of the stadium is a good indication of the social value of Parramatta Park to both the local and wider community.

Note: There are incomplete details for a number of items listed in NSW. The Heritage Division intends to develop or upgrade statements of significance and other information for these items as resources become available.

Description

Construction years:	1883-
Physical description:	Currently large sports stadium servicing Parramatta LGA
Physical condition and/or Archaeological potential:	All archaeological remains relating to early agricultural activity and to the later construction of a cricket oval would have been destroyed by construction of the stadium.
	Date condition updated: 08 Dec 97
Modifications and dates:	Construction of Parramatta Stadium commenced 1981
Current use:	Stadium
Former use:	Agriculture, oval

History

Historical notes:	"This area, approximately 8 hectares, was alienated permanently from the park in 1981. The boundary is complex but mainly involved: the old Cumberland Oval; the square playing field to the south; two parcels of land to the west, one reaching the River; the area over the 1804 mill pond to the north-west; and the parking areas etc, to the north-east and east. Major redevelopment took place some years ago which involved the removal of a number of trees of great heritage value. Stadium land borders on native remnant areas along the River bank to the west. In 1883 listed as 'Alfred Cricket Ground'. This oval was smaller than Old Kings Oval. It would be on the site of the present Parramatta Stadium. By 1887 the oval was marked 'Enclosure of Athletic Sports and Games'." (Varman, R.V.J. 1997)

Assessment of significance

SHR Criteria d)

[Social significance]

The development of the Cumberland Oval to a stadium met with opposition from conservation groups. This opposition marked the beginning of vocal lobby groups opposing unsympathetic development of the park and alienation of park lands.

SHR Criteria e)

[Research potential]

All archaeological evidence on this site would have been destroyed by the construction of the stadium.

History

Historical notes:

" In 1883 this space was listed as 'Kings School Cricket Ground'. Ebsworth in 1887 wrote 'Enclosure planted with ornamental trees' (trees indicated). The oval was fenced. Another fence was located to the south of the oval in 1887" (Varman, R.V.J. 1997) through site/sport specific management regimes. Actions: To this end the Parramatta Park Trust will: reinforce the scale and definition of the Oval by peripheral planting; replace the fence at Old Kings Oval as shown in Burton & McDonald, 1987 (fig 15, p.35) and reinforce and replace the old race course plantation of Stone pines with the same species.
