

Neville Osborne

From: Paul Hodgkinson <paul.hodgkinson@theaark.org>
Sent: Thursday, 19 November 2015 3:38 PM
To: Neville Osborne
Subject: A comment in relation to the proposed modification to Collector Wind Farm

Dear Mr Osborne,

Wake from your addiction thieves and plunderers before the last of your ability to discern good from evil withers away and you become the state of decay from which you will not recover.

These words are reminiscent of the sentiments of my ancestor Reverend James Watkin (1805-1886) in regard to land fraud in New Zealand and Australia. They are a warning to you and others who may read them.

As you may be aware, in 1788 a flag was said to be hoisted above the soil by an officer of the arguably cognitively impaired English who declared that the land belonged to a small island King with its surplus of talented thieves and scoundrels. With booze-theft-addled-minds and forthwith cognitively impaired they had set sail for a much bigger island with their dishonest intentions. Forward to 2015 the booze-theft-addled-minds have yet to work out their addiction. The Crown and other famous fraudsters have emerged as clear and present enemies of the honest.

Today the lands of the Guumaal and Gundungurra People at Collector are the latest instalment in the booze-theft-addled-saga of these cognitively impaired thieves, drunkards and scoundrels. The Minister for Department of Planning is ready to make a speech at the opening of the proposed Collector Wind Farm. Ready to say to all in attendance that the land belongs to a small island Monarch and the latest in a succession of talented planners have worked tirelessly to construct an array of income generating industrial wind turbines as wind-spinning-gambling-wheels. New South Wales Department of Planning approve of the approval of the New South Wales Parliaments and their Federal colleagues approve of all who swear allegiance to the Crown of Thievery. This grand misappropriation is an approved deception supported by a system of rewards for the faithful subjects in a sordid scheme administered by New South Wales.

That Collector Wind Farm has the approval of the Minister is surely as shaky a foundation as the State of New South Wales. It is indicia of the same booze-and-theft-addled-gambling with the severe dose of cognitive impairment. The foundations of the proposed industrial wind turbines at Collector are in microcosm borne of the same collective impairment running through every such fraudulent transaction. It is without substance and lacking integrity.

Until such time as the State embarks to build its foundations honestly with the individuals that hold the dignity to land title and all the constructions placed upon it, the highest contempt must be metered to those who knowingly and willingly perpetuate the land frauds that are a disgrace to the caucasian people. We are complicit in a scheme of irrefutable proportions.

Ngi ganni,

Paul Hodgkinson
A resident of Collector