

Dorset Road is exquisite in its variety and delicacy. It starts at the Kyuga turnoff with the fringe of new trees behind which the bund would rise steeply from the fence. the first photo. The trees would not hide much of the hill, rising 120 metres from the road, that is around 40 storeys.

Dorset road is beautiful; it has high points, curves and valleys, creek crossings and tall eucalypts bending over the road..

It would remain in some form after a rock emplacement borders it, and a new heavy road would take off from it to link with the broken Castlerock Road.
But mine traffic would change it irrevocably.

So it is the loss of two roads, not one, which is threatened.
