Submission from UnitingCare Jack and Jill Preschool:

As part of responsibility to allow children their right to participate, we have continued our discussions around the new river crossing, and allowed children to express their thoughts on the current plan.

Our project stems from the United Nations Child Friendly Cities initiative- an approach currently being trialled in Victoria and South Australia, and soon to be implemented more widely across the country. The approach challenges councils and city planners to listen to children's voices during planning and give their opinion due weight, as they would any other member of the community.

In doing so research tells us that children become more connected to the community, empowered to influence change, and develop skills which stay with them across their life span.

As educators, we have noted that our children have been very engaged and concerned with this project. We have also noted that many families in our community use the walk way of the old bridge for recreation, and children have directly commented on the limits of this walk, and dreamed of better facilities for recreation and play.

As Grafton has limited recreational walkways near the river (especially in comparison with other Australian towns and cities), we as a community see this circuit to have great potential for a recreation walking/cycling track that is very unique. We hope you see the value in the children's vision to have play facilities in the space between the bridges on the South Grafton side.

We have attached letters and requests from the children. Each letter has been dictated by children, and adults have not influenced what they choose to say in any way.

Thanks for considering our feedback,

Grafton Bridge Project Environmental impact statement

Could we have a seat for if the walk is long and you want to sit down near the path?

From Nina

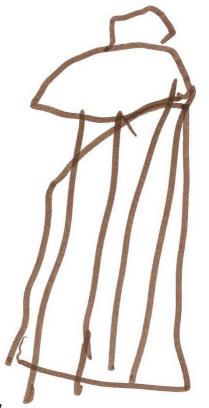

Please can we have a playground at the end of the bridge?

Dear Adam, This is a slide to put near the path by the bridge. From Tayla.

Dear Adam,

Will you remember to put a rubbish bin near the path at the front? If you are hungry when you are walking over the bridge, then you will have to hold your rubbish, and then you won't be able to play on the swing near the path.

From Matthew
