Dear Sir,

I have lived in Berry all my life, I am now 59 years old.

In my younger days Victoria Street was never opened to the highway. There was never as many people or cars around then, but I do remember the excitement around 1970 when eventually Victoria Street was opened to the highway. I remember how much easier it was to come in and out of Berry, and also to travel around the town.

I feel if you decide to block off, or change it into a one way exist, you will be making a bad choice. The smaller streets heading south from Queen Street would really feel the burden, why not leave it how it is.

Thanking you
yours faithfully
G. Bramley
