To whom it may concern,

I went for a bush walk along Georges River National Park last weekend. My father has been unwell for quite sometime, and I needed to feel that life goes on, that I am a part of that life. The natural environment, all the species of plants and animals found in this National Park are a wonder to behold. At time I noticed some vehicle traffic from the road, which isn't too far. But I was pleased to hear the sounds of nature still singing out. I fear that with huge development on the Georges River, another precious natural landscape will be marred by the pursuit of profit.

Therefore, I object to these modifications, on merit and on principle because it will ruin the already pressured natural landscape & ecosystem found along & within the Georges River.

Yours sincerely,
Luke Shields
