Development is destroying the beautiful city Sydney is. Oscar Niemeyer, the great Brazilian architect said that cities should have a limit growing, when they reach certain number of habitants, a new city should be built instead of overcrowding the old one. The development is everywhere, all over the harbour, the cbd, in areas that have no structure for traffic, like Berry Bay. Cutting historic trees and replacing them with buildings? Is Sydney going to be the new Mexico City or Tokyo? I strong object to destroy green areas to crowd suburbs.
