Hi Chloe

I refer to your email from earlier today in relation to a modification application from Sydney Zoo seeking to amend the built form and design of the aquatic habitat.

At this stage the Department has no comments in relation to the modification application mentioned above. However, it is a requirement under the Exhibited Animals Protection Act 1986 that all applications to construct an animal display establishment and subsequent structures need to be individually approved by the Department.

Once all relevant licenses and permits have been issued, the Department will distribute the relevant information to other impacted Government agencies

I hope this is of assistance.

Regards

Tam

Hi Chloe,

As discussed earlier, DPI are in regular contact with Sydney Zoo relating to the licenses and permits they require to exhibit animals to the public. This process will continue for some time and until all animals have been sourced and housed within approved structures.

Once all relevant licenses and permits have been issued, the Department will distribute the relevant information to other impacted Government agencies
